HE MAKES THE DEF

An Official Whose Duty It is to Throw Down a Glove

DESCRIPTION OF CHALLENGE

A Chivatris Title Which Has Been Heat by the Dymoke Family Ency Since the Boys of Richard IL.

The death of l'rancis Dymoke, the pueer of Englan is champion, which somewed at Hornostle recently, has confeded the world that even in the pidat of the pressut pressio and utiliarian age one knightly office, at least, n existence, to contradict the asser-a of Edmund Busine that "the age chivalry is gone." The late holder the office was a Lincolnahire marisrate and an officer in the local militia; the two previous once were clergymen. The office is not, so it has often been cated, hereaftery is the Dymoke farring, but is attached to the lord of the master of Serivelsby, which is held by he ancient tenure known as grand years; — L. a. where one holds ands of the average of service which he has to perform in person. The service by which Serivelsby is held is thus quoted by the New York World: "That the ford thereof shall be the king's shamplen."

The champonship has no minry attached to it for, though the Dymoke family hold feriveisor on the fendal senure of performing this duty, they have been owners of that manor for spend of five hundred years, and they obtained it, not by royal grant or out of the public purse, but by marriage with an heiress, the last of the public in a Marriago grant deposit in a marriago grant depo with an heiress, the last of the profid line of Marmion, granddaughter of Philip de Marmion, a name which recalls memories of chivalry and of the poetry of Shakespeare and Sir Walter Scott. There is no record of the office under the Saron kings, but, according to the late Sir Bernard Burke, its duties were appended by William I. as an henor to the old baronial house of Marmyon, or Marmion, the ancient owners of the manor of Scrivelsby. This manor, together with the castle of Tamworth, had been conferred, soon after the Norman conquest, on one Robert de Marmyon, lord of Fontenoy, in Normandy, on condition of e name of Dymoke is Welsh. The okes, or Dymoke-for the name lied both ways—claims traditions and from Tudor Trevor, lord of ford and Whittington, and founder he tribe of the Marches. The himself had three sons, the secchief himself had three sons, the sec-oud of whom, marrying a daughter of the prince of North Wales, half a cen-tury before the Norman conquest, be-came the ancestor of one David ap Minioc, who, in the Welsh tongue, was styled colloquially Dai Madoc, the word Dai being the short form of Da-vid. His son and heir was David ap Dai Madoc, or David Dai Madoc and by the usual abridgement Dai Madoc came in the course of time to be procame in the course of time to be proeltion from which to Dimoe or Dymoe, and again from that to Dimos or Dy-moke is easy and obvious. The first, then, of the Dymoke fam-ily who fulfilled his office as champion was Sir John Dymoke, knight, who married Margaret Ludlow in the reign of Edward III., and was present at the coronation of Richard II. His claim was disputed by Baldwin de Freville. the lord of Tamworth castle, but after deliberation it was found that the right belonged to the manor of Scriv-ebby, as the caput baroniae or head of the barony of the Marmion family: and, as it appeared that the late King Edward III. and his son, Edward, prince of Wales, known as the black prince, had often been heard to say that the office was held by Sir John Dymoke, the question was settled in The Gentleman's Magazine for 1801 contains a picture of the royal champen, Henry Dymoke, in the act of riding on his white charger into Westminster ball, and throwing down the glove or gauntlet of defiapes. supported on either side by the duke of Weilington and the marquis of Anglesey, also on horseback, while two beralds stand by on foot with tabards and plames. The performance of the champion on this occasion is thus described by Sir Walter Scott in a letter to one of his friends:

The champlen's duty was per-formed, as of right, by young Dymoks. a fine looking youth, but hearing perhaps a little too much the appearance of a maken knight to be the challenger of the world in the king's He threw down his gauntlet. werer, with becoming manhood, and showed as much horsensamhip as the crossed of lenights and squires around him would permit to be exhibited. His armor was in good taste, but his shield was out of all propriety, being a round roudsche, or Highland target, a defensive weapon which it would be impossible to use on horseback, instead of being a three-cornered or leather bield, which in the time of the tilt was an spended round the need. Parton this antiquarian scrople, which you may believe occurred to few but myself. On the whole, this striking part of the exhibition somewhat dis-appointed me. for I would have had the champion less embarrasced by his assistants and at liberty to put his horse on the grand pas, and yet the young lost of Schoolsby looked and

BALTON SINK FILLING.

That the Desert Will Again

The famous Falton sea is likely to reespecial at a very early date. Whether fi will make a permanent stay of it this time or not, says the San Francisco Examiner, is of course a mystery, but that it is coming back is the optilor of old dee at men. Two years ago the transformation of Salton Sink on the Colorado desert into a wast but shallow sea startled the world, and for a time it appeared as if the great basin which centuries ago had been a continuntion of the Gulf of California was to return to its original condition. But in some way the break in the bank of the Colorado river whence the water came was closed, the supply ceased, and the rays of the sun soon knocked out the rays of the sun soon knocked out the same.

E. W. Lang is one of the most experienced desert men in the country, and he has a large bunch of cattle now in the vicinity of Indian Wells. He is in this city and in conversation with a reporter said: "Yes, the water will come into Salton basin again this year. Whether it will be as large as hest time or larger I cannot tell, but the flow from the Colorado river has been going into the desert for some title past and may continue. There was a very large fall of snow last winter in the mountains of Montana, Idaho and Utah, and the melting of this has caused the present break into the desert. The overflow of two years ago was the first in twenty years, but everything indicates that a few hundred years before the basin was literally a sea, as the beaches are still-plain about the foothills, and the rocks show water wearing.

the foothills, and the rocks show water wearing.

"When the overflow of two years ago occurred the water followed the identical channels that had become almost obliterated from age. The water is now running into the desert in two branches. One is Carter river, and leaves the Colorado about fifteen miles below Yuma. The other channel is New river, and is forty-five miles further down the river. Salton is about two hundred feet below the level of the debouchements of these rivers. The water has been flowing into both of the breaks I have named for several weeks past. Both New and Carter rivers had advanced about thirty-five miles when I left, and I think the water will be into Salton in a few weeks more. A number of large lagoons have already been filled between the Sink and the Colorado. One of these is fully ten miles square. It will not take long before these depressions between the river and the big basin are filled, and then the water will alide over into Salton."

NEW USE FOR CATS.

"I had a large cork and bung factory in Grand avenue, and I needed power to run my machinery," writes a Mil-waukeean in Harper's Weekly. "You wankeesn in Harper's Weekly. "You know, of course, that there is an immense amount of stored up electricity in a cat. The problem for inventors has been to invent a way to extract it profitably. In the rear of my factory I constructed a one-story circular building, some sixty feet in diameter. On the foor of this I colled a glass pipe six inches in diameter. The first coil ran around the outside of the room, the coils gradually growing smaller, till at last, in the center, it was no larger than a table. It gave me something like a mile of pipe. The topand sides of this pipe were lined with rather stiff hair brushes, the bristles being a little more than an inch in length. "At that time Milwaukre was over-

"At that time Milwaukre was overrun with cata. It was impossible to sleep nights. I put a notice in the paper that I would pay ten cents a dozen for prime cats, delivered at my factory. I got sixty dozen the first day and stored them in the basement of the power-house. The motor operated thus: Pizeing in the outer end of the glass pipe an imitation rat made of rubber and propelled by a small inte-rior storage battery. I would then ad-just a cat immediately behind it. The rubber rat would start off at a terrific rate-it was made to go through the mile of tubing in from two to three minntes and the cat, of course, followed furiously, thinking to catch the supposed animal throughout the entire distance. Gentlemen, it was exciting to watch a healthy, active cat whip about those spirals, with the mechanical rut about a foot ahead and going like a cannon ball. The cat's back and sides rubbed against the brushes and her electricity was thus extracted. With a storage battery, and by sending a cat through every five minutes, I generated enough electricity to operate my entire plant, light my factory and sell power to run neighboring passenger elevators and neighboring passenger elevators and small machinery. It also took the yowl out of the cats and gradually the city became quiet. At the end of a week a cat could be caught and used

A Novel Swindle. A novel kind of swindle was practices in a German town the other day. A man struggling along under a heavy burden suddenly stumbled and crashed through a plate glass store window.
The proprietor of the store demanded payment. The porter said he had no money. Passers by advised that he be searched. A thousand mark note was found on him, which, he said, telonged

It was several years ago that Gallavardin drew the attention of French practitioners so the advantages of treating the smallpox according to the plan originally suggested and carried out by John of Goddesden and Waters.
The treatment in question consisted simply in keeping the patients absotutely away from all sclar light, and this solar darkness had to be, from first to last complete and uninterrupted, otherwise no beneficial results could be looked for. The same authority has recently published the results of his experience with this method, covering a pariod of some sixteen years, showing that, if this plan be carried out, the great advantage ensues of there being no period of suppuration, and, in consequence, the subsequent scarring is infinitesimal.

Is Your Money Well Invested?

A VALUABLE SUGGESTION.

Hard carned money should be invested with care. How to keep the small savings safely invested, and yet where they will be increasing, has long been a vexed question. It is sometimes hard for small investors to judge between good and had investmenta. However, if they buy real estate in a rich and thriving city; a city moted for its great manufacturing interests; a city that furnishes free fuel to encourage such concerns, they can make no mistake. We offer investors lots in the most promising place in the United States, a city that had doubled its population several times within the last four years. To has the most promising future, and the large manufacturing interests contering there will make it double its population again this year. If you have a few dollars the magain this year. A VALUABLE SUGGESTION.

Write us for further information immediately, and learn how to double your money within a year. A few lots will make you rich, or to act as our agent will make you money.
